

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Easier, cheaper mobile transcripts New product lets clients access mobile services through a browser instead of an app

Hillborough, CA, August 2, 2013 — OMTI, Inc., developer of ReporterBase, the country's number one best-selling office management software for court reporting firms, announces the development of a new product: RB Web Mobile On™.

RB Web Mobile On is the new way to give clients their transcripts and other information on their mobile devices. While it acts like OMTI's RB Web Mobile Apps on iPhones, iPads, Android devices, etc., it is actually accessed through the browser. This makes it easier for lawyers, paralegals and other court reporting agency clients to find:

Instead of searching through an app store, they type in a URL. They can then bookmark the page to their mobile device's home screen. No installs, no updating. Whenever they click the icon, they open what looks and acts like an app, but is really a mobilized website. In addition to its low hassle factor, it also requires less power to run than an app.

Benefits for agencies include the lower cost of one RB Web extension versus one for each mobile OS (currently OMTI offers separate apps for iPhone, Android, Blackberry and Windows Phone) and no installation/update/maintenance issues. OMTI handles the entire process.

For over 25 years, OMTI has provided office management software for court reporting firms, records retrieval companies, and other legal support businesses. ReporterBase legal support firm software is the number one best-selling office management software for court reporting firms in the country. RB8's companion online offices product, RB Web 8, offers legal support firms the ability to customize their web services to their businesses while integrating closely with their in-house office management system. See our website, www.omti.com/rb, for more details.

###

If you'd like more information about our new product, or to schedule an interview with Stella Chang, please call Stella at 650-544-2147 or email her at stella@omti.com.